Particulars of the Battles at Trautenau and at Munchengratz.

Wm. H. Russell, in a letter to the London Times, gives the following description of the great conflict:

On the 27th of June one army corps of the Crown Prince—the Fifth, or Posen Corps, commanded by Gen. von Steinmetz—fell in with the Austrians at Nachod, on the Silesian frontier, 25 miles west of Glatz. Like some others which followed in its wake, this corps had entered Bohemia both by way of Braunau and Reiners, with orders to move on to the fortress of Josephstadt by the famous pass of Nachod. The losses in this first encounter were not inconsiderable on either side, and it seems that both succeeded in taking some guns. At the close of the day the Prussians, as well as the Austrians, maintained their previous positions, a portion only of the latter retiring to Josephstadt, being replaced by fresh troops. On the day following Gen. Steinmetz ordered a second attack. Fortunately, he had been reinforced in the night by a division of the first or East Prussian Corps, being this time confronted by the Austrian corps of the full complement of 60,000 men. The battle lasted several hours, terminating with the retreat of the Austrians and the occupation by the Prussians of Skalicz, the next station on the road to Josephstadt. About 3,000 Austrians were taken prisoners, and nearly as many lay dead or wounded on the battle-field. On each side some 90 guns had been at work. The Austrian cavalry was repeatedly routed by the Prussian Lancers, losing all their standards, and eventually abandoning the field to the victor. As to the Prussian infantry, it relied as usual upon the rapidity of its fire, the three ranks discharging at once, the first kneeling down. The Austrians, on the other hand, with the impatient temper of Sclavonian races, and wishing to make up for the inferiority of their guns, had recourse to bayonet charges. But long before they could attain the Prussian ranks their number, under the volleys from the needle gun, was so thinned as to cause the remnant to turn about and fall to the rear. With true Austrian perseverance they came on again and again. The result was terribly identical in each case. In one instance only did they succeed in crossing arms with the inaccessible enemy.

One Prussian regiment agreed to cease fighting to give the Austrians a chance of measuring their strength in cold steel. It was one of those cool and habitually taciturn regiments from the far north, who during the last few weeks had been a wonder and an ever recurring grievance to the loquacious race inhabiting the pleasant and fertile valleys of Silesia, Felix. Uttering savage yells the Sclavonians rushed forward. The Germans presented their bayonets, and in a moment, when the first shock had been encountered, cast away their muskets, drew their swords, and fought man to man in the good old fashion. I remember having read in German history of the strategical art, that so long as the sword was the principal weapon used in war, no Continental tribe could match the Teutons on the battle-field. However, when the Germans unluckily for themselves, stumbled upon the invention of gunpowder, other nations, more adroit in handling the musket and executing the manœuver its use involves, were enabled to dispute the glory of military prestige with its former monopolists. Whatever the atom of truth in this self-complacent assertion may be, there are few cases on record where the Germans have really warmed to their work on the battle-field while confined to shooting and stabbing. Shooting leaves them indifferent; the bayonet they positively hate; having an indefinite feeling that it is not a legitimate weapon of warfare, but a sort of long stiletto, while, if you give them a sword, the heavier the better, they are in their own element and need no instruction as to how to lay it on effectually. To indulge their battering inclination, the Prussian soldiery formerly used to reverse muskets, and belabor the foe with the but end, a process far too energetic to employ with so delicate an instrument as the needle gun, which would fall to pieces on the second blow. So nothing remains but to draw the sword, and although it is said to be a little too short and a great deal to light to suit the taste of the men, still, as it is the nearest approach to a club within their reach in this civilized age, they prefer it in an emergency to Brown Bess. In the present combat its efficiency in their hands was fully proved. After a few moments of slashing right and left, the Sclavonian bayonet yielded up to the German sabre. On the evening of that day the Prussians were no further than ten miles from Josephstadt.

THE LATE DISASTER TO MAXIMILIAN'S FORCES—MUTINY AMONG THE BELGIANS.—A letter dated City of Mexico, June 20th, says:

The disaster to Col. Duoin, and later the revolt of the 400 Belgian soldiers near Monterey, and also the failure of Austria to keep its contract with its Archduke Maximilian, have conduced to place the Imperial forces in a very embarrassing position. Gen. Bazaine and staff left for the seat of war in Chihuahua this morning. They are going by San Luis Potosi; from there to Zacatecas through Aguas Calientas. From Zacatecas Zamami proposes to compel the evacuation of Chihuahua, Sonora and Sinaloa by the Liberal forces. By concentrating the Imperial forces at San Luis Potosi, Aguas Calientas and Zacatecas, the commandership will have a force of 12,000 well disciplined troops to lead toward the North. That he will force Juarez to evacuate Chihuahua without even an engagement, is not worth questioning. But we believe that the capital city, and the large interior towns, will become a prey to the Liberals during the campaign, and the advantages gained by them more than sufficient to counterbalance the defeat which they are sure to suffer, if pursued by the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of France in Mexico. The Capital is endangered by the absence of the Marshal. Puebla is poorly garrisoned. Orizava has a mere corporal's guard to defend it. Mendes, at the head of 4,000 French and Turcos, are closely besieged in Morelia, the capital of Michoacan. The probabilities are that Diaz and Figuoroa, in the south-east, will cut off communication with Vera Cruz by besieging Puebla and Orizava, and Alvarez threatens Chapultepec and Mexico by advancing with his Pintos from the south-west.

But that for which Bazaine has started to accomplish is, in an Imperial view, of great importance; in fact, from the earnestness displayed by the Imperialists in the city, the very salvation of the Empire and its continuation depends upon the success of the French at the North during the interval between now and November. The object for which so much is staked is to force Juarez and the Liberal divisions operating at the North, over the border into the United States—thus hoping to raise a political or diplomatic question which will be an excuse for a prolongation of occupation of Mexico by French troops without apparent inconsistency. The bad state of the roads will compel cautions and delays which will be in favor of the Liberal and native troops. If, by a combination for defense and an exhibition of skill in tactics and strategy hitherto unemployed by Juarez, he succeeds in concentrating the entire Republican Army of the North to contest his ground with Bazaine in the front, while the army of the Central States closes upon him in the rear; if, we say, that by a course seldom known to the Mexicans, they can contend with Bazaine—contest every foot of ground, and hold Chihuahua until November—all of the embarrassment that it is expected will fall to the Liberal cause will be against the Imperialists.

PRESIDENT ROBERTS.—In the speech of President Roberts to the Fenians, at Buffalo, he is reported to have said:

The dawn of Irish liberty is approaching, and in a friendly spirit I ask you to extend your hand to every other people who are struggling for liberty; help to enslave no man, and remember that God created us all according to his own image; that He looks not so much at the color of the face as the color of the heart. [Applause].

When people read of Theodore Tilton, they probably imagine a grave, gray, severe person. The New York Citizen says: "Our associate saw him last week on the floor of the House of Representatives, and he looked like a college freshman, with a profusion of brown locks and not enough beard to make a door mat to a bee-hive."

Vallandigham has been making a speech at Columbus, Ohio, in which he "paid the highest compliments to the firmness and integrity of President Johnson." We never heard that this eminent Democratic leader bestowed similar attentions upon President Lincoln.

HORACE GREELEY.—Horace Greeley is thus sketched by the New York Citizen:

"Greeley's tastes are singularly—almost pathetically—simple. No man of equal, or even approximating power, is so little self-conscious, so little self-asserting in his personal relations. He has a large and fertile farm at Chippaqua, on the Harlem railroad, and there he takes his few and dearly earned holidays—drinking water like a camel, from a pure spring which lies in a hollow near the bottom of a tumbling cascade upon his grounds; or taking exercise with a hatchet in thinning out the trees of his plantation, where they grow too thickly for mutual development. His farm is an aggregation of many farms, bought up with the patient economy of years, and contains, in consequence, nearly a dozen orchards, making as many separate purchases of small estates. Of these orchards and their thriftiness he is more proud than of all the power of the Tribune. To keep them free of apple worms is with him a labor of affection. How many barrels they produced last year, and how many he has hopes they will produce this season, are themes which he discusses and dwells upon with no less apparent interest, and far more vivacity, than his pen displays in dissecting Secretary McCulloch's estimates. His present house is not the one he means to occupy, being the one he found upon the central farm at the time of its original purchase. It is a very simple farm structure, of only some half dozen rooms, but to its left there is a beautiful cascade tumbling down through thickly wooded slopes, and brawling over mossy rocks; and close to its margin, or at least within view of its descent, and within hearing of its continual murmur, he is clearing a plantation on which his future homestead is soon to rise. Only a few choice pictures in the parlor, and some sculpture bought during his visit to Italy, mark out the interior of the house as different from similar houses of its class belonging to the uncultivated farmers of his neighborhood.

On this land it is Greeley's delight to try costly experiments of sub-soiling and new manures; new agricultural implements, and new crosses in the various breeds of choice cattle. When he has seen justice done his poor friend, the negro, and made sufficient money to secure the future of his children, our philosopher believes that he will have philosophy enough to abjure both literature and politics, and go off somewhere fishing.

Of domestic history the subject of our sketch has little, owing to the continued delicacy of his wife's health. His greatest sorrow was the loss of an only son; his greatest joys, next to the decree of universal emancipation, two promising daughters, the elder of whom is now being educated at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in the upper part of the Island."

BARE FACTS.—A preamble and resolution offered in Congress lately, by Mr. Williams, of Pa., recites, among other things, that

1. "No traitor who has survived the chances of the battle-field, has been otherwise 'punished' than by the award of public honors or the remission of disabilities."

2. "The memories of the traitors' dead have been hallowed and consecrated by local public entertainments and treasonable utterances in honor of their crimes."

3. "Honors to dead traitors have not only been tolerated by the National authorities, but in some instances approved by closing public offices on the occasion of floral processions to the graves."

4. "The privileges of paying honors to the martyred dead of the Armies of the Union has been denied to the loyal people in Southern communities, by the local authorities, and with the connivance or consent of the military agents of the Government."

These are mere straws. They do not rehearse the fact of scores of returned loyalists being waylaid, shot or hung in the Southern States; the facts of incessant injury and spoliation of freedmen; the fact of predatory gangs and secret cabals reorganizing everywhere; the fact of 12,000 pardons issued by the National Executive to the worst traitors of the South; the fact of a daily "crystallization" of Southern hatred going on, under the guise of "supporting the President against Congress." All these facts are not to be recognized. Let us "make haste slowly" in our reconstruction.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 16, 1866.

South Carolina a Teacher of Loyalty.

If anything in the conduct of the "reconstructed chivalry" could astonish the people of the North, the impudence of South Carolina as she appears at Philadelphia, would quite overpower them. The "reconstructed" Governor of that State comes among loyal men, and after insolently boasting that he had been a participant in the rebellion, assumes an air of lofty patriotism, avows with mock solemnity that he and the people of his section are among the truest friends of the Union, and proceeds to lecture those to whom the nation is indebted for its life, on their duties to their country! The South's representatives—its "loyal" representatives—most of whom surrendered their parricidal arms to the United States authorities but a little more than a year ago, are "unjustly" denied admission into Congress! "Loyal" men, such as Confederate Generals, Cabinet Ministers and Congressmen, "have been knocking at the doors of Congress for eight long months, and have been refused admittance!" And this outrage in the very face of the principle that representation should accompany taxation! Can the Constitution, that noble instrument which Orr and his associates have labored to preserve, possibly survive this lethal blow?

Observe the tone and temper of this speech. Mark the animus which it reveals. Not a word in it acknowledges the crime of the rebellion, or even the error of secession. Not a single expression of repentance does it contain. If the author of the speech feels a regret for the past, that regret evidently is that the rebellion was a failure. He talks as if the conduct of the South in repudiating the authority of the Government was the most natural proceeding imaginable, perfectly legitimate, and as free from crime as the most quiet discussion that ever took place in the field of ordinary debate. He has not a word of censure for himself and his fellow rebels; the only accusations he makes are leveled against a loyal people to whose magnanimity, and not to his own desert, he owes for the life he has forfeited in the endeavor to destroy his country.

The very beginning of this insolent speech abounds in slanderous allegations and malicious falsehoods against the North. It asserts that the "South seceded, and with the North appealed to arms, and finally both sections threw down the gauntlet to settle their dispute on the field of battle." What are the facts? The South seceded and appealed to arms; the North was compelled to fight to save the Union. The North did not appeal to arms. The North did not throw down the gauntlet to settle the dispute on the field of battle. The loyal States were forced by the rebellious States into the war. The war did not begin, as Gov. Orr would make us believe, by the capture of Fort Sumter from the Confederate Government by the Government of the United States.

This deliberate effort to inculpate loyalty equally with treason, is not confined to the South alone. "My policy" has propagated similar sentiments in the North. If within a single year treason can be taught to claim equal merit with loyalty, how long will it be until it will come to be regarded as the superior virtue?

The speech of Gov. Orr is valuable in one respect as showing what description of persons Johnson and his lickspittle crowd regard as "loyal," and therefore qualified to be members of Congress. The South, says Gov. Orr, "has sent her best men, her loyal men as representatives." Since the admission of the Tennesseans, [illegible] others, there are not four others all told, who can take the test oath. Yet these men, many of whom were prominent actors in the rebellion, are sent up to Washington, and the President calls them "loyal," and quarrels with Congress because it does not admit them. Is anybody still in doubt as to what constitutes loyalty by the test of the "new party?"

The harangue concludes with a talk about the constitutional rights of the late rebels and their love for the Union. Heard ever any one impudence like this? Here is a man whose whole energies for years have been expended in violating the Constitution, now appealing to it to secure him in the highest privileges it can confer on the citizen. Here is a man who by his own confession has never been in times past loyal to the Union; now claiming a devotion to it equal to that of the best patriots in the land. These professions, with his censures of loyal men are the extreme audacity of insolence, and would never have been heard in the North had it not been for the "noble tribune's" plan of making treason odious.

Vexatious Detention of the California Mails.

We doubt not that for some time past it has been generally noticed that the California mails came through only six days in the week, instead of every day as formerly. The detention is at Sacramento, and is owing to the refusal of the Central Pacific Railroad Company to allow their cars to leave that city on Sundays. The reason assigned by the Company is that they are not obligated to carry the mails more than six days in the week, and that they therefore prefer to render no more service than they are compelled to perform. The real reason, as stated by a Northern California journal is: "to detain passengers over Sunday in Sacramento, thus giving the hotels of that city a benefit of about six hundred dollars per week, which they would otherwise miss altogether." But whatever the reasons of the detention may be, it is a serious inconvenience to all whose mails are supplied by this important line. The railroad men are very strong, and know that they have full power in this matter, as well as over every other with which their Company is connected. They suppose, therefore, that the people will be compelled to submit to this, as well as to any other imposition which they may wish to practise, and that there is no remedy against their arbitrary conduct in detaining the mails. If it is out of the power of the Postal Agent to correct this evil, and the Department cannot compel the Railroad Company to carry the mails according to the plain intentions of the contract, Congress should be appealed to for relief. If the Company, taking advantage of a technicality, for its own benefit or that of others persists in its refusal to do what it ought in the matter, its charter can be annulled and the road placed in other hands. Just now it looks as if we should be compelled to submit for some months to the inconvenience, vexation and delay consequent upon the illiberality of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. The contractor for the line from Lincoln to Portland—Mr. H. W. Corbett—is performing his share of the service with perfect promptitude; but if those who have the contract beyond the Southern terminus of his route continue the service under present arrangements, there is little need for the coaches on the Oregon line to run more than six days in the week. It is extremely vexatious to have the regularity of the mails on so important a route broken by the niggardliness of a Company which has absorbed so large a portion of the wealth of California.

We deny to the negro the right of suffrage because we believe that it would only subject him to greater wrongs than he now endures.—Herald.

Indeed! We thought you denied him the right of suffrage on the broad principle that this is a "white man's Government." But Democracy is constantly receiving new lights. A while ago it was for the benefit of the white man; now it is for the good of the negro.

DATES TO AUGUST 14.

Vallandigham "Sucked off the Bridge"—Fernando Wood's Letter.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—Vallandigham spoke this morning, and agreed that he would not enter the Convention. He demanded that the Ohio delegation should request his withdrawal, and he would use the letter for political purposes. If he had not resigned, Gen. Stoneman would have moved in Convention the following resolution:

Resolved, That no person shall be entitled to a seat or to participate in the deliberations of this Convention as a member thereof, who encouraged or gave aid to the rebellion previous to the passage of an ordinance of secession in the State, territory or district in which such person resided, or who has been convicted of giving aid and comfort to the rebellion during its continuance, or who being within the lines of the United States army, counselled or abetted resistance to the draft or any proclamation or any order of the United States for the suppression of the rebellion.

There is great joy that Vallandigham is disposed of. His resignation was signed at 10 o'clock, and the news spread over the city. He was the Ogre of the Convention and would have split it.

Fernando Wood resigned yesterday, saying in a letter to Doolittle, "I am anxious for the success of Government. If successful, the results will be of the most salutatory character, but they cannot be so if the proceedings are disturbed by any cause whatever. I am informed that numerous disagreements are likely to arise in the Convention by an attempt to exclude some delegates—myself included—whose political record is distasteful to radicals and their sympathizers. I feel confident that such an outrage would not be perpetrated by the Convention, and though I have nothing to take back as to my course during the war, and deny the right of any to raise that question, yet I am too much devoted to the high and patriotic purposes of the Convention to allow my presence to be the means of disturbing its deliberations, and, therefore, shall not attend as delegate." [Here the lightning prevented anything further being received.—REPORTER.

Wheat—The market to-day is very quiet at $1 50.

Barley—Sales of choice coast at 92½c. Choice brewing, 90@95c.; all old crop.

Gold, Legal Tenders Mining Stocks.

Gold was 150 in New York yesterday afternoon, and Sterling 107½@107¾.

Legal Tenders here are nominally unchanged, brokers buying at 71@71¼, and selling at 72@72¼.

Mining stocks are dull, and transactions for the moment light. Crown Point was in better favor, having advanced $10 since the morning board yesterday. Savage advanced $75. Belcher declined $10, [illegible] $6,50, and Hallion $2.

Sailed—Aug. 15, ship [illegible], Queenstown. Steamship [illegible], Hong Kong via Port Angles. Bark Glimpse, Puget Sound.

The Mountaineer, "Official paper of the United States for the State of Oregon," "Consumer of A. Johnson's Bread and Butter," got by today-ing to Lincoln's political enemy, J. W. Nesmith, is smarter, we doubt not, in figuring on the profits, rewards, largesses, emoluments and compensations of stipendiary political service, than in casting up columns of election returns. It persists in asserting that "radicalism" cost the Union party 2,500 votes in our late election, of that, in other words, we lost through the obnoxious measures of "radicalism" almost 2,500 votes on our majority of 1864. As Lincoln's majority in 1864 was 1431, and as the average majority last June was 548, making a difference of only 883, it is not easy to see how those "2,500 lost votes" so much talked of by the "bread and butter" organ, can be ciphered out by any rules now known to arithmetical science. And when it is remembered that the Union vote in June last was larger by many hundreds than the Union vote in 1864, the puzzle is rendered still more difficult. But "Conservatism" can triumph over figures as easily as over any other palpable facts whatever.

THE OMNIBUS APPROPRIATION BILL.—The House, July 13th, passed the Omnibus Appropriation bill, which is significant of an early adjournment. This bill is always held over until the last days of the session. Besides containing appropriations for all of the Atlantic coast light houses, it has the following interesting items:

For facilitating communication between the Atlantic and Pacific States by electrical telegraph, $40,000. For expenses in detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting treasury notes, bonds and other securities of the United States, as well as the coins of the United States, $100,000. For supplying deficiency in the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen, $20,000. To establish national cemeteries, and to purchase sites for the same, at such points as the President of the United States may deem proper, and for the care of the same, $50,000. For completing the north wing of the Treasury Department, $200,000.

MADE A BLACK OF HIM.—A California paper says that in a mining camp in Shasta county, lately, one of Price's men, after talking considerable treason and drinking more whisky, boasted that all h—ll and the Lincoln Abolitionists to boot couldn't make a black of him. A veteran of the Army of the Potomac, being present, jumped the traitor, and, getting him down, called for a pot of black varnish and "made a black" of him forthwith, in spite of divers kicks and plunges. After being thus reconstructed he seceded from the crowd, a wiser if not a better man.

Hon. Cornelius Cole, Senator elect from California, writes to political friends in San Francisco, that he supports the measures of Congress, and not of the President; and that he had been offered the whole patronage of the Pacific coast as an inducement to change his course. Senator Conness writes the same in regard to Mr. Cole.

Seward once said that the man who spelled the word negro with two g's—"nigger"—would never be President of the United States. The "sage of Auburn" had no idea at that time that the country would ever see the sad work of a J. Wilkes Booth.

It is not a supposable case that the Democratic organization can be abandoned now.—N. Y. World.

It was, years ago, the most completely abandoned organization we ever knew of. It is to be hoped that it will seek no lower degrees of abandonment.

Mr. Greeley, who is getting fat, and is a hard worker, is noted for improving all his spare opportunities to sleep. He sleeps through his railway trips, and also sleeps in church when he goes to that place of repose.

STATE ITEMS.

R. L. Simpson has been appointed postmaster at Lafayette, vice J. T. Henbree, removed.

Old Boyakin has been for several days at Lafayette, trying to get himself arrested. So says a correspondent.

Reports from the newly discovered quartz lode on Rogue river, are more encouraging than at first anticipated. Several men are at work upon it.

"Many farmers" of Jackson county have published a call for a meeting of the farmers and millers, for the purpose of organizing a "Grain-growers' Association," the object of which is to control the price of grain.

The demand for dwelling-houses in Jacksonville is on the increase, and building, though carried on extensively, does not keep pace with the demand. At the present rate of increase, Jacksonville will present quite an imposing appearance in a few years, says the Reporter.

An immigrant train of ten wagons arrived at the Dalles on the 14th under command of a gentleman by the name of Miller. They came from Iowa. They experienced no trouble from Indians, and had a pleasant trip. Their stock is in very good condition and looks fine. They are going to Marion county.

We learn that the new locomotive, "J. S. Ruckle," is to be transferred to the Cascade portage immediately, and the "Bradford" to take the place of the "Ruckle" on the Dalles and Celilo road. The O. S. N. Co. find the Dalles road not sufficiently substantial to run with safety the new locomotive, as she is very heavy.

The Red Bluff (Cal.) Independent says of the management of the Oregon and California mails under the new contract: "The mail contractor, H. W. Corbett, of Oregon, has, so far, used the utmost diligence in fulfilling the terms of his contract with the Government, and we have yet to hear the first word of complaint against his administration of matters along the road."

We have received a copy of the "Minutes of the annual meeting of the Congregational Association of Oregon," held at Portland, June 21st. We learn from it that the membership of the various churches in the State which were represented, aggregates about three hundred. There have been two new churches organized within the past year, and the old ones are reported as in a prosperous condition.

We have received from Mr. Freeman Smith, Jr., specimens of the Benna Vista stone ware taken from the second kiln burned. The ware is certainly of a very superior texture and strength as compared with the average of the imported article. The enterprise of manufacturing stone ware at Benna Vista is proved beyond a doubt, a complete success and the proprietor is confident of his ability to supply, in a short time, the demands of the whole State. Mr. Smith is entitled to great credit for perseverance under difficulties, and should receive the patronage of the public, as should every home manufacturer of indispensable wares or goods.

A correspondent at the Dalles says: The Woolen Factory project has virtually gone up the "spout," or collapsed—cause, too much "Teal on the brain." At the last meeting of the Board of Directors it was decided to suspend further operations at present. The meeting adjourned to meet the first day of January, 1867. It seems Jo. Teal, the President elect, succeeded in drawing the "wool over the eyes" of the stockholders to his entire satisfaction, and now wishes to withdraw and so burst up the whole arrangement. There is a great deal of dissatisfaction existing in the minds of a large majority of the stockholders, in consequence of this contra move. "Jo." had rather see "Horns" sticking out of a Government contract than the erection of a woolen mill.

Many interesting reminiscences of the early settlement of Oregon are elicited in the examination of witnesses in the case of the Hudson Bay Company vs. the United States. Those who were here at the time of the Whitman massacre will remember that the Indians were led in that affair by a half-breed called "Jo." who had been in the employ of Dr. Whitman. Every effort was made to capture this man, but no clue was ever obtained as to what became of him. It appears from the testimony of a recent witness that when the Indians found that the whites were about to make war upon them, Jo. in order to get out of the country and save his neck, represented to the Cayuses that the Mormons, who were then just coming to Salt Lake, were disaffected Americans who would help the Indians in the fight. The Cayuses called a council, and sent three messengers with Jo. to the Mormons. When they arrived in the Snake country near to Salt Lake, east of Fort Hall, the Indians were poisoned, probably by Jo., their bodies and horses being found in that vicinity. Jo. was never traced further, but he probably arrived safe in Mormondom.

PROTECTION WANTED.—A petition has been published in Nevada, addressed to Acting Governor Crossman, signed by every settler of Paradise Valley, appealing for military protection from the predatory bands of savages who drove them from their homes last year.

A CHANGE.—The rebels of Louisiana are pardoned for their treason, and Union men have been arrested and are to be tried—the Union men comprising the Constitutional Convention. Johnson proposes in this way to make treason odious.

PICTURE CONVENTION.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 89 First Street, expect to hold a Convention at their PHOTOGRAPHIC GALLERY solely for the public good. Delegates from all parts of this State and the adjoining Territories arrive daily and put their faces to the above firm which does away with the credential and proxy business. The people at large are always welcome.

H Hill, Capt H O Small. Mr Wilde, U D Hardy, H Moore, A Meir, E Cabally L I [illegible] and Wife, Miss Watkins, Miss M Rector, Miss J Smith, Miss Victoria McGreen, A S Leland, Alex Weig, H [illegible], Mrs Hickey and child, W Benson, Joseph [illegible], J W Tyson, Robt Dunlap, L Scott, wife and family, [illegible], J C Campbell, J J Smith, Mrs Henrietta [illegible], J N Whitney, Wm Thompson, Mrs [illegible] and three children, Reino Genna, and 55 in [illegible]

[illegible] PLANT.—The Sacramento Bee calls attention to a [illegible] plant that is found in many gardens under the name of "Caper" It is a Euphorbia, and [illegible] It is the Euphorbia lathyris, of which the botanists say that an acrid, [illegible] principle, residing chiefly in the milky juice, pervades the whole order The principal [illegible] from mild stimulants to the most [illegible], but it is volatile and easily expelled by heat [illegible] When fresh this root is a violent [illegible], this acridity by washing and exposure [illegible] Croton oil and croton [illegible] obtained from plants of this family, and the [illegible] is such that great care should be taken to [illegible] from the "Caper Spurge," or, as it is called [illegible] "Caper"

[illegible] The building operations of our city [illegible] have afforded our stone cutting [illegible] a large amount of business To fill all [illegible] the limited number of hands engaged have [illegible] early and late The stone for sills, and other [illegible] of buildings, is quarried about Forty [illegible] Portland, near the Clackamas river. It is [illegible] "Oregon granite," but while it p[illegible] the [illegible] of granite, and is neither a [illegible], [illegible] excellent for the purposes for which it is used [illegible] appearance it is very similar to "Connecticut [illegible] stone," but it is harder Fifty-eight plain and [illegible] window sills, and three hundred and ninety-five feet of door sills, of this material, are now being [illegible] Mr. Young's [illegible]

YIELD OF GOLD IN MONTANA.—The Helena Herald [illegible] of a bar of gold lately run by an [illegible] yet [illegible] of that city, which weighed 196 ounces. The owner of the [illegible] a few days later unloaded a safe at the same [illegible] office, containing 700 pounds more of clean dust [illegible] of two and a half months work upon Montana Bar, Confederate Gulch Eight men were constantly employed with hydraulic works during the time [illegible] the owner of the claim made the 700 pounds [illegible] of expenses After he got through working [illegible] he sold the bed rock for $1,500 Six other [illegible] upon the same bar have been equally as successful.

[illegible] THEATER.—It may not be generally known that Portland has any but the Willamette Theatre. Such is the case, however, exhibited by the [illegible] of the Third Ward, that they have opened a new place of [illegible], and hold forth nightly, under a full change of programme, at what they term the Fourth Street Th[illegible] The price of admission is placed at two bits [illegible] These the manager dispenses of by the dozen at [illegible] places in the city, and it is said the boys are doing a thrifty business

[illegible]—The following is a list of standing committees of the Common Council, as formed since the incoming of the new Board: Accounts and current expenses, Carter, [illegible], McCraken , Fire and water, Rosenheim, [illegible], Carter; Streets and public property, Lownsdale, Lieber, O'Connor; Landings and wharves, O'Connor, [illegible] Health and police Carson, Rosenheim, [illegible] Bennett, McCraken, Carson, Judiciary, [illegible], Lownsdale, Rosenheim; River improvement, McCraken, O'Connor, Lownsdale, Ways and Means, Lieber, Carter, Bennett.

"ALL QUIET."—Such was the [illegible] from a contemporary radical upon calling at one of those offices which serve as headquarters for iniquitous offenders against the laws of the land, and it will apply equally as well to Portland just now There were some few little skirmishers during Tuesday and yesterday but nothing deserving the name of an [illegible] It is supposed that the excessive heat [illegible] those who claim to be [illegible] on it bigger'n a [illegible] and who fear that during this warm weather they could not do justice to a first class row, and there [illegible] from pugilistic demonstrations

FALSE ALARM.—People were nervously circulating, and [illegible] with white lips, the story yesterday that one of our [illegible] neighbors on Sixth street had been "[illegible] to that bourne from whence no traveler returns," in the short space of three hours, through the agency of cholera. Our friend at the time was about town as usual, but he had just arisen from his bed where he had been suffering the extreme agony of an attack of cholera [illegible] It was indeed a serious matter, but we are pleased to know that our friend is still alive and in a fair way to recover

LOST A TIRE One of our city truckmen yesterday lost a tire off the right hind wheel of his truck which was heavily loaded with flour He happened to be within a few feet of his destination however, and no damage was done. It is said that if the fellies of a wheel are soaked in [illegible] oil the tire will wear out before it will get loose. Soak a fellow in sod corn and he will get both tired and loose many times before he wears out Still the more he is soaked the tighter he will get. Curious, isn't it?

OWNERS WANTED —Two memorandum books, one supposed to belong to M. T Robinson, and the other to Jas [illegible] of [illegible], can be had upon application at the [illegible] room of the OREGONIAN establishment upon payment of charges for advertising The latter has been in our possession for some time, awaiting an owner both were picked up in the streets, and contain valuable papers.

THE VANCOUVER SCHOOLS.—As will be seen by reference to advertisement this morning the annual session of the Holy Angels' College Rev P Mans, Perfect, at Vancouver, commences on Monday next, August 20th The boarding and day school for young ladies under the charge of the Sisters of Providence at the same place will also commence at the same date

ORDERED EAST.—Col. Ross of the 14th U S Infantry, lately in [illegible] and at Fort Steilacoom Washington Territory arrived in this city yesterday afternoon, by the steamer Rescue. He is ordered to report at New York. Lt. Kistler is left in command of Fort Steilacoom. Both these officers served with distinction during the late rebellion

PAPER COLLARS.—It would seem from reading our exchanges that it has been definitely ascertained that paper collars are poisonous. They are whitened with arsenic and will cause eruptions on the necks of those who wear them and into whose circulation the poison happens to be introduced.

THERE is a [illegible] for Ira Gruss at the telegraph office.

FROM COLORADO AND THE PLAINS

The Denver News of July 25th has the following:

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT NEVADA

The Journal says that on Saturday in Nevada a man by the name of Macauley shot to death another man named Burns There are a great many stories about it and the public will be [illegible] to learn the truth even from the trial [illegible] under the influence of bad whisky [illegible] Macauley is in jail and the Grand Jury being in session he will be [illegible] without the customary preliminary examination

THE CROPS

Crops up the Platte [illegible] ripening rapidly. The barley is in shock and much of the wheat is about ready for the harvest

The grain harvest in Kansas is nearly over The crop is represented as the best for several years The heavy rains the first of the month do not seem to have injured the grain to any considerable extent.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Yesterday a man named John Howard an employee at Delano s lumber yard [illegible] this city was seriously injured by the falling of a pile of lumber upon him One side of his head was badly bruised, and also one of his legs. He is getting along now as well as could be expected

TROUBLE FROM THE INDIANS

The Vedette says The Indians are making trouble in the South Pass route Sunday the telegraph operator at La Bonte 65 miles west of Fort Laramie was given a lively chase between La Bonte and Deer Creek

STATISTICS OF JEFFERSON COUNTY

Up to the present time Jefferson county has been entirely an agricultural one During the past year much prospecting has been done and many valuable gold silver and copper lodes have been discovered from which we may hope large profits will be made in the future, but a great source of her wealth lays in her immense beds of coal, iron fire-clay lime and building stone of the finest kind which run through her entire width from north to south. From the mountains through her whole length from west to east run Clear Creek and Bear Creek both flowing with an immense volume of water at all seasons of the year affording the best of water power along their whole length Outside the mountains nearly every acre of the land is susceptible of cultivation. Jefferson also has the advantage of lying directly between the Denver and mountain markets, contiguous to both where her farmers can dispose of their produce quickly and at very little cost of transportation The following statistics are from the Assessor's books

Amount property assessed	$750 314
Number of inhabitants	1 7"9
Males over 21 years	535
Females ..	586
Colored	3

This shows nearly double the number of inhabitants and quite double the amount of property assessed over the previous year a very gratifying fact for the county and territory when all the disadvantages of grasshoppers, high prices, etc., are taken into consideration.

FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY

Our regular Olympia Correspondent under date of August 12th sends the following:

The town has been quite lively the past week The steamers Gen Wallker Resolute, and Pioneer brought up large stocks of merchandise for our merchants

On Wednesday the Diana arrived with Gen Ingalls Col Babcock Maj Glenn, Col Sackett and other military men who took stage across the country immediately

On Thursday night, the Ne Year arrived from Victoria with freight and passengers, and having reduced the fare, goes and comes well loaded. Her officers C Crosb[illegible], son , Captain, D Wallace, Pilot and Ed Whitworth Clerk—are well known along the Sound

On Saturday the Fidelater arrived from Victoria with a party of excursionists among whom were Col. Hayward, owner of the coal mine at Bellingham Bay and of the firm of Hayward, Coleman & Co. San Francisco; Judge Brockway of California; Hon. Allen Francis, Consul at Victoria, and Collector Wilson of Port Angeles The party were looking after the coal interests of Bellingham Bay, Clallam Bay, Seattle and [illegible]

This morning, the gunboat Lincoln arrived with another party

The youngest child of Capt J H. Fleming died this morning at this place

The following items are from the Tribune of Aug 11th. Col Ross, Commander of the Post at Fort Steilacoom, has been ordered to New York, on recruiting service, and will take his departure next week. First Lieut. A. G Kistler will be left in command

Messrs. Lonetot & Stone have put up and burned a kiln of seventy thousand brick, in their yard on the East side of this place.

New Book

The Life and Campaigns of General U S. Grant from his boyhood to the surrender of Lee with Sherman s Great March from Chattanooga to Washington and the final Official Reports of Sheridan, Meade Sherman and Grant With portraits on steel of Stanton, Grant and his Generals. By Rev P C Headley, author of Life of Napoleon etc New York, Derby Miller & Co T. B. Trevett General Agent for Oregon.

The author of this book is known as one of the most vigorous and fascinating of our biographical writers In this case he has produced a work which will take rank with the very best of the "war books" published. The style is highly animated and the battle scenes which the book contains are unsurpassed in descriptive power. But the book is not a mere effort at fine writing While it is embellished in many places with splendid word painting, the truth of history is not violated or obscured by an attempt to set off the subject in "managed phrase." The narrative is the work of one who admires and honors the great man whose skill and heroism rescued the Republic from the hands which sought to destroy it. The largest portion of the book is devoted to the early history of General Grant and his Western Campaigns, though the decisive events of his grand military career are presented in sufficient detail.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling, testimony of the counterfeiters Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice

The Crutch in the Corner.

BY JOAN M'INTOSH.

"Why, Billy, your room is as cold as the hut
We had by the swamp and the river,
Where we lost our Major and Tim, you know,
And sixty more with the fever."
"Well, Tom, old fellow, it's hard enough,
But the heat at times knock under;
There's nary a stick of wood in the house,
But that crutch in the corner yonder.

"Sorry I 'listed? Don't ask me that, Tom,
If the flag again was in danger,
I'd aim a gun with this aching stump
At the foe, were he brother or stranger,
But I say, ought a wound from a shot or shell,
Or a pistol bullet, by thunder!
Forever doom a poor fellow to want
With that ar' in the corner yonder?

"That crutch, old comrade, ought never to be
A draft at sight on the Nation,
For honor, respect, and a friendly hand—
For clothing, and quarters, and ration.
My wife!—she begs at the Nugget House,
Where the big bugs live in splendor
And brag o'er their wine of the fights that brought
Such as that in the corner yonder.

"And Charlie!—he goes to some place up town,
Some ticket for soup arrangement,
All well enough for a hungry boy,
But Tom its effect is estrangement.
I'd sooner have kicked the bucket twice o'er
By a shot or a round ten-pounder,
Than live such a life as I'm doing now,
With that ar' in the corner yonder.

"There's nary thing left to pawn or sell,
And the Winter has closed on labor;
This medal is all that is left me now,
With my pistols and trusty saber;
And them, by the sunlight above us, Tom,
No power from my trust can sunder—
Save the power that releases me at last
From that ar' in the corner yonder.

"I can raise this arm that is left to me
To the blessed Heaven above us,
And swear by the throne of the father there,
And the angels all who love us,
That the hand I lost and the hand that I have
Were never yet stained with plunder,
And for love of the dear old flag I now
Use that in the corner yonder.

"Do I ask too much when I say, my boys,
Who lost for the nation's glory,
Now that the danger is past and gone,
In comfort should tell our story!
How should we have fought when the mad shells screamed
And shivered our ranks, I wonder,
Had we known that our lot would have been to beg
With that ar' in the corner yonder."

Prussian Official Account of the Battles in Bohemia.

BERLIN, June 30.—The following dispatch has been received here from his Royal Highness the Crown Prince:

REINERZ, June 27th.

I have most respectfully to report to your Majesty as follows upon the events of to-day:

On the afternoon of the 26th General Von Steinmetz had pushed forward his vanguard under Major-General Von Lowenfeldt toward Nachod. After a short engagement the latter got possession of the pass, which was abandoned by the Austrians with a loss of 15 killed. The vanguard threw out skirmishers in the direction of Skalitz.

At half-past nine this morning the vanguard was sharply attacked by two brigades of the Sixth Austrian Corps, well provided with artillery, and followed by a third brigade in support. The Prince Holstein's heavy cavalry division at the same time appeared upon the field. By the efforts of the vanguard, which withdrew, slowly skirmishing, time was gained for the main body of the corps to emerge from the pass and reach the heights immediately in front. At this moment I came up in good time from Braunau. As the troops arrived they were immediately thrown forward to hold the nearest heights, the K[illegible] division to the right and the [illegible] division to the left. The entire artillery, ninety guns, was brought up into the line of battle, to which the enemy was reinforced by the last brigade of the Sixth Corps and its reserve artillery. The advance of the enemy was soon checked, and as soon as our corps—strengthened by an infantry regiment and reserve—had taken up its position, we were enabled energetically to resume the offensive. The hostile Prince John's Cuirassier brigade was defeated by a brilliant charge of the First Uhlans and Eighth Dragoons. General Von Wnuck, Colonel Von Tresckow and Lieutenant Colonel Von [illegible], the commanders of both regiments receiving honorable wounds.

The infantry, whose fire had fine effect, attacked at [illegible] with the bayonet, and took possession of the advanced woodland and surrounding ground. During these operations the flag of the Third [illegible] battalion fell into our hands.

Toward 3 P.M. all the enemy's troops were in retreat, followed up by the fire of our artillery. One detachment of the First Uhlans succeeded in capturing two guns; three others were abandoned in the hasty retreat. The cavalry, supported by some of the infantry, engaged in temporary pursuit, while the brigade of the Sixth [illegible] came [illegible] taking [illegible]. I returned to Nachod about 6 o'clock, after I had seen almost all the troops that had been engaged upon the field, and [illegible] in your Majesty's name [illegible].

The battle to-day is an honor to General Von Steinmetz and the Fifth Army Corps. I cannot sufficiently praise the extraordinary coolness of the young troops. All arms acted most gloriously in the discharge of their duty. The needle-gun effected considerable slaughter, and caused the failure of all the enemy's attacks, which were undertaken with great intrepidity. The infantry displayed rare powers of endurance in face of the hostile fire, at first greatly superior, and the cavalry showed itself more than a match for the much vaunted Austrian horse. Upon the Austrian side twenty-eight battalions were under fire, to all of which prisoners have fallen into our hands. The Fifth Corps, on the other hand, had only twenty-two battalions to oppose to this force, and of these the troops kept in reserve only came under the fire of grenades. The brilliant success of the day has been purchased with comparatively slight loss. From all I have seen I estimate it from 500 to 600 men, among whom are a very considerable number of our brave officers. In addition to those already mentioned among the superior grades, I have to mention Major Von Natzmer, of the Eighth Dragoons, killed, Major General Von Ollech and Colonel Von Walther, commander of the Forty-sixth Regiment, wounded. The enemy's loss is, on the other hand, very large. Over 2,000 prisoners are in our hands. His dead lay in many places in heaps, so that I estimate his total loss at 4,000 men.

The trophies taken were the above mentioned five guns, one flag and two standards. I shall not fail to forward to your Majesty, as soon as possible, further details and a special list of losses, together with the names of those who had the opportunity of especially distinguishing themselves.

FREDERICK WILLIAM,
Crown Prince, General of Infantry and Commander in Chief of the Second Army.

The following official dispatch refers briefly to the events of the ensuing day:

BRESLAU, June 29th.

I have to announce to your Majesty a second victory upon the 28th, more hotly contested and more sanguinary than upon the 27th. Our loss in officers and men, though the enemy's is decidedly greater. Some trophies have been again taken, but the number is still uncertain. Numerous prisoners have been taken. Skalitz is in my hands. An order of [illegible] that I was opposed to-day by the [illegible], with the Sixth and Eighth Corps. After two battles my troops are full of courage and enthusiasm, breaking out into loud cheers. STEINMETZ.

GENERAL SCOTT—A PLEASANT REMINISCENCE.—A correspondent tells the following story of General Scott which shows how the old hero could unbend at times from his martial dignity, and make himself agreeable to the little folks. Says the writer:

I have seen an album which contained this inscription on one of its title pages:

"Treason is the greatest crime."
WINFIELD SCOTT.
WASHINGTON, D. C., August, 1861."

The name is written in the stiffly feeble characters so well known, but the motto is traced in a much bolder and more forcible hand. The album is the property of a New York lady, who visited the city at the extra session of Congress in 1861. She was very anxious to get the old General's autograph, but soon learned that it was not an easy thing to do. She, however, hit upon the expedient of sending her little girl of about ten years, right to his office during business hours. The charming creature told the orderly that she must see General Scott—and she would not be put off with any plea of business, but waited half an hour, till her request was finally taken to the adjutant. Of course, she was admitted to his presence, though he had no intention of allowing her to see the General. She persisted, however, and said she must see him. The officer finally pointed out the door which led to his room, and told her she could go in if she dared. She took him at his word, and in an instant stood within the door. Speaking of it afterward, she said she was afraid when she first looked up, "but as soon as he saw it was only me, he said right pleasant: 'Well, little girl, what do you want?' and I told him my Ma wanted him to write his name in her book; and he looked sharp at me, and then smiled a little bit and shook hands with me, and asked me who my Ma was, and I told him, and I told him my Pa was in the army and Ma was all alone with me; and then he just kissed my check and wrote in Ma's book, and said 'Good-morning' to me, and I came out and nobody didn't hurt me at all."

The Outbreak at New Orleans.

Nothing has shown more conclusively the danger of hasty reconstruction in the lately rebellious States than the outbreak at New Orleans. Advices, so far as received, although conflicting to some extent, are plain and conclusive upon one point, to wit, that the secession element was quite as ready as ever to commit excesses. Many persons were brutally murdered—shot down in the streets because a mob wished to wreak its vengeance upon those who opposed their wishes. Prior to the war it was no uncommon thing for men who expressed opinions in opposition to those held by a majority of the Southern people to be mobbed, tarred and feathered, and sometimes even hung upon the first tree which afforded a convenient lodgment for a rope. So accustomed were the Northern people to hear of outrages committed upon indiscreet persons who had ventured to express opinions unfavorable to slavery, that very little attention was excited thereby. Imprisonment or tar and feathers were looked upon almost as a matter of right. Even public journals could not be sent through the mails, if they so much as hinted that slavery was not a divine institution, and a postmaster who would permit such an abuse, as it was termed, was likely to be mobbed. Time and again have newspapers been taken from the mails in open day, in violation of law, and destroyed.

In the outrages committed it matters not who may have been to blame. If the Convention was entirely illegal there was no excuse for shooting 125 persons. It must be manifest, from the dispatches which have already come to hand, that the mob were determined to kill as many freedmen as possible, and to wreak their vengeance upon those white persons who had favored the Northern cause. The object was not to take prisoners, because it was well understood that they had committed no offence for which the penalty would be a forfeit of their lives. We say, without the fear of contradiction, that the slaughter at New Orleans was brought about by the most vindictive spirit—that it was simply a desire to kill as many opponents as possible.

The Northern people have been tolerant to the rebels to a fault. They permit men of this class to go and come wherever they please throughout the country, filling places of honor and profit, but in the South how different are affairs! It is not safe for a man born north of "Mason and Dixon's line," to live in certain sections of the lately rebellious States, even should he keep his mouth shut. He must go farther than this; he must declaim against the North or there is actual danger that he will be assassinated. This condition of things must be changed. The people are so overwhelmingly opposed to permitting violences, that all excesses must react against the South. This very breach of the peace will cause thousands of voters to go to the polls at the approaching Congressional election in the Northern States, and vote for the most radical candidates to represent them in the National Councils, who would perhaps otherwise have staid at home, or voted for [illegible] of conservative feelings. In a national point of view there has been nothing lost by the violence committed at New Orleans, for it will cause many well-meaning men to stop and reflect upon the consequences of a too hasty reconstruction of the Southern States. They will most likely arrive at the conclusion that the country has made concessions quite as fast as is conducive to the public good.

There can be no desire to hold the Southern people in a state of vassalage any longer than shall be necessary, but it will be a great mistake to concede too quickly power to the leaders of the rebellion, who seem to be the chief instruments of evil. It is better for the South that no chance shall be given for demagogues to stir up strife until affairs shall have settled down. The South has been reconstructed quite as fast as circumstances appear to justify.—Bulletin.

POLITICAL VIEWS OF GEN. GRANT.—The New York Tribune of a late date gives the following:

Two of the Johnson organs in New York have taken particular pains to state simultaneously through their Washington correspondence, that under no circumstances would Gen. Grant be a candidate for the Presidency in 1868. There is no authority for such a statement. There is no authoritative statement of Gen. Grant's political position and views, excepting that which appeared in his home organ, the Galena Gazette, last winter, wherein the editor assumed that Gen. Grant would respond to the demands of the loyal men to save the country in time of peace as he had saved it in time of war. One paper admits what is true, that the Lieutenant General heartily approves of the Reconstruction Constitutional Amendment; and expresses an earnest hope that it may be adopted.
